

The amount that people will pay for something is directly related to the value that they see in it.

What is more valuable to a person than their home and their family? If you are keeping the focus on home and family, then cost is never the problem. If you focus on selling “cheap” life insurance, how much value do you think your clients will see in what you offer them?

